Ratepayers Dissatisfied Bow Valley S.D. Set Up

Ratepayers of Arrowwood and Representatives From Milo Would Secede, Wanting to be Part of Foothills S.D.

A meeting was called and held at the Arrowwood school house of the parents and ratepayers of the Arrowwood school district and representatives from Milo and other districts to discuss the future welfare of the Bow Valley School Division which lies south of the Bow River. Great dissatisfaction was expressed with the present set-up and the meeting was strongly in favor of seceding from the Bow Valley Division and making representation to the Department of Education requesting re-allocation of divisions so that the district in question could be made a part of the Foothills School Division. Complaints were based on the assertion that the Arrowwood district was inequitable in the division on the understanding that such an arrangement was for a three-year trial and now that the three years had passed, no provision was made in the School Act for secession, also that the quality of the teachers supplied for the past two years was not as high as the requisition paid by the Arrowwood district would justify. Other complaints hinged on the lack of hot lunches, vitamin tablets and lack of van services. It is the aim and desire of the Bow Valley School Division to have all the pupils requiring Grade 12 at Cluny but the idea does not meet with general approval. It is felt that if large high schools and composite schools are to be established they should be established at larger centres where more health and recreation facilities are available. Were such a composite school established at Vulcan or High River, it would have greater appeal to this district as the natural trend of the district is toward Calgary. A meeting is later planned and will include Milo, Queenstown, Shouldice and Arrowwood and delegations will be sent to the Foothills School Division Board.

The council of the Village of Milo has purchased the former municipal office of Marquis from the Municipal District of Blackie. It is intended that this building shall be used for the benefit of the public and it is ideal for small meetings.

The fame of the Lake McGregor monster is echoing across Canada bringing glory to the village of Milo under the heading "Milo Ogo-pogo." P.G. Thomas has recently had a letter from Sgt. G. S. Howard, editor of the R.C.M.P. Quarterly, enclosing the editorial on the Milo ogo-pogo appearing in one of the Ottawa papers. It is rumored that Okanagan, Loch Ness (Scotland), Victoria and other points which exploit sea monsters aren't any too pleased at this competition from the prairies.

The Ladies' Aid of the United Church held a pie and ice-cream social at the village office and cleared $40.00 for their funds.

Mrs. Anna Thompson of Cecil Lake, B.C. spent a week with her sister-in-law Mrs. Pauline Thompson.

The entire district rejoiced with Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Umscheid upon the safe return of their son Jim who has been a prisoner of war in Germany for nearly ten months. Flying Officer Umscheid took part in the forced marches as the Russians advanced further and further into Germany. He tells of the weakened condition of the men as these marches were made on meagre rations and a little stolen food. Youth recuperates quickly and Jim now looks the picture of health.

A Legion dance was held at Queenstown on August 3rd in aid of a fund for welcoming home the boys from overseas.

Great Britain Elects Labor Government

Churchill and Eden Elected, But Labor Wins in 2 to 1 Landslide Over Conservatives. Clement Attlee New P.M.

Prime Minister Churchill's Conservative party suffered definite defeat in what has been called the most sensational election in Britain for the past hundred years. Mr. Churchill himself was elected as was Anthony Eden, but these were personal tributes. Apparently Mr. Churchill's ministry and domestic policies were not to the liking of the British people.

Clement Attlee, the new Prime Minister and head of the Labor government takes over to organize the post-war Britain along more Socialistic lines.

The standing of the new House of Commons with its 640 seats gives Labor 389 seats; Conservative 194; Liberal 11; Liberal National 14; other parties 15; doubtful 4; deferred 13.

The landslide was a surprise to the British people, as no forecasts indicated anything approaching this great Labor victory. Winston Churchill, the man who strengthened and fired Britain through its most hazardous hours, has resigned his premiership and Prime Minister Attlee will represent Britain in the final Big Three considerations.

Ernest Bevin will succeed Anthony Eden in the foreign office, with Herbert Morrison and other Labor leaders who have worked up from the bottom will add strength to the Ministry. Greenwood, Cripps, Dalton and such well-known men are in the new cabinet.

Amongst Conservative ministry defeated were Brendan Bracken, Horace Belsha, Grigg, Amery, Waterhouse, and others. Rural and middle-class constituencies that have been traditionally Conservative swung to Labor.

The Labor party is pledged to carry on Mr. Churchill's foreign policy. This includes first priority to defeat of Japan, support for free elections in liberated countries a firm hand in Germany's control.

Laski, who has been called the power behind the scenes in the new government has announced that one major aim of the Attlee cabinet will be to wipe out such political plague spots in Europe as the Nationalist government in Spain.

This means that Attlee and Stalin are now openly against Franco. It is unlikely that the Kings of Greece, Yugoslavia and Belgium will get any great backing now from Britain.

Reasons given for the upset in Britain which has startled the world are Beaverbrook's dirty election campaign; too many electioneering stunts and too much dependence on trivial matters, ignoring the serious matters domestically; the fear of younger voters and fighting men that they would not get much better than the dole under Conservative rule. Too much exaggeration in the attacks on Labor weakened the Conservatives. They did not help themselves when Churchill accused Labor of plotting to coerce a nation into social slavery, and when they pictured Laski, the McGill professor, as a dictator. And the threat that the banks would collapse and all the people lose their savings under Labor, was too much for British credulity.

Perhaps most important was the continued connection with pre-war appeasers and reactionaries, and the fear that such foreign policies would again dominate the government. The Conservatives had to live down Chamberlain's catering to dictators out of fear of Bolshevism and all the pre-war inaction and subterfuge. It was one of the election ironies that Winston Churchill who fiercely denounced this inaction for so many years before the war, should suffer the penalty of his party's defeat. Again there was the unexplained delay of the government in authorizing schemes for social reform for which the country had been clamouring.

Winston Churchill, though allied with the Conservative party, has never been a solid party man. He was first a soldier and journalist, and then won election through a working class constituency when he was 26 years of age. Then, he joined Lloyd George's cabinet, and did a big job as First Lord of the Admiralty, but the Gallipoli debacle brought him defeat. Later as a member of the Conservative party he stood alone in denouncing the Munich agreement. What he has done for Britain as a successor to Chamberlain needs no retelling. He led Britain safely through her darkest and most dangerous hours, world from Nazi domination.

VULCAN BAKERY INSTALLS NEW ELECTRIC OVEN

Short of Bread One Week-End The Vulcan Bakery is installing this week a new 200 loaf electric oven. Mr. Fendle reports that they expect to resume bread-making the first of next week. With the new oven and accurate control over the heat, he expects to be able to put out a better product.

As a result of tearing the old oven out last week-end in preparation for the new one, Vulcanites learned how much they were dependent upon "the staff of life" a commodity which many take for granted. The stores in Vulcan and the Bakery all ran out of bread on Saturday night. As a consequence a few had to go without on Sunday, and on Monday even the restaurants had to stop serving bread with meals. Needless to say the arrival of the noon train Monday bearing bread from Calgary was eagerly awaited. However that day the train at dusk a car near Midnapore and arrived here on how late. Homes and cafes alike again had to have the noon meal sans bread.

ALSTON SPORTS—AUG. 8

The Advocate this week printed posters for the Alston sports to be held on Wednesday, Aug. 8th. VULCAN HIGHLANDERS WIN TROPHY

Members of the Vulcan detachment, 2nd Bn (R) Calgary Highlanders, are justly proud of the recent award to the Vulcan detachment of the Efficiency Trophy awarded to the most efficient platoon in the battalion in yearly competition. Last year this trophy went to No. 16 Platoon, Calgary. All phases of their training is taken into consideration in awarding this trophy and Vulcanites may well be proud that for 1945 it will remain with the local militia of which Major C. R. Robson is in charge. The trophy will shortly be displayed in one of the store windows.

Mr. and Mrs. Dyce Allan, accompanied the former's sister, Mrs. Forsythe, to Calgary, where they spent the week-end. Mrs. Forsythe left on Sunday night's train for the return trip to Stonehaven, Scotland, after spending the past six years in Canada.

Swimming Pool Well Successful

The results of the Tests made on the Swimming Pool Well are as follows:-

Depth of well	144 ft. 0 ins.
Pump Setting	136 ft. 0 ins.
Length of Airline	118 ft. 0 ins.
The Static Level	25 lbs. equa's 78 ft. 5 ins. to Water from Ground Level

Depth of Water for Pumping Purposes is 57 ft. 5 ins.

The first test taken on August 1st, using a Jack Type Pump with Engine power with a 2 in. suction line registering through a 1/2 in. Tricent Water Meter gave the rate of discharge at 17 Imperial Gallons per minute or 1020 Imperial Gallons an hour.

On August 2nd the Pump worked steady for a period of twelve hours, the discharge rate and airline readings were taken hourly, the rate being fairly constant.

This assures an adequate supply of water and the Lions Club is now awaiting plans which should arrive in a few days.

The Vulcan and District Memorial Swimming Pool now seems assured. Watch the Advocate for full progress reports.

COMPULSORY TRAINING

GENERAL PATTON created some furore not long ago by telling a group of Sunday school children that they were probably the fodder for the next war. Premier Smuts of South Africa, spoke in Ottawa, in similar vein through more diplomatically worded. He said: "Every young man should be trained to arms. Keep steam up in the engine. Nobody knows who the enemy will be." He said that every young man should have compulsory military training, so that every country could have a body of men ready to be whipped into combat shape.

Today in the minds of most people there is certainly much less confidence that there will be no more war than there was after the last war. Perhaps this in itself will mean a greater vigilance in trying to safeguard peace. And out of the fear that there may be need for future defence against some unknown enemy comes a greater readiness to accept the principle of compulsory military training. Such a training could be an all-round asset if intelligently and vigorously worked out. But if carried out as a sort of negative duty, administered by a group of outmoded, stagnating, cushy job militarists it would be worse than useless.

On the credit side of military training is the transformation in the average young man's bearing, appearance and general set-up. Of course, a young man training for some specific field of battle is going to absorb instruction much more eagerly than one who is merely going through the motions to train him for some vague, remote contingency. But in any event the trainee learns to walk smartly and handle himself, and he absorbs a certain type of physical discipline which makes him responsive to organized movement.

But the other aspects of compulsory training are not so clear. If such a plan were adopted it would probably mean a year or two for every youth, followed by short refresher courses throughout his military age. Presumably the period of intensive training would come at approximately 18 years of age, upon graduation from high school, or before he takes up full-time wage-earning. Now that is the time when a boy's physical and mental powers are at high peak, a most critical time in development. His potentialities can be expanded and directed under wise stimulus, and full encouragement of mind and body. But if full use is not made of all his capabilities, he can regress to some serious extent in the space of a year or two. We saw plenty of that regression during depression years. If compulsory training is adopted, and every youth is required to give a year of his life to study of military tactics, it is only fair to demand that such a year keep the boy employed up to full capacity. Make it a hard year's work, not a period of learning to "soldier" on the job. If they emerged better qualified to cope with wage earning civilian work, then the nation would reap positive rather than speculative benefit. But such a course would mean alert, progressive, young instructors training boys for life as well as for the arts of war, not old army creaks content with tactics of decades ago.

And this raises the question of what should be spent on military training. Are the instructors to keep abreast of every new scientific development in the realm of mass killing? Should students be given rudimentary training in use of every newest devilish device? Such a program would mean tremendous expenditure. But whatever is spent it should be made of double purpose, for use in peace or war.

DRAMA OF THE SEASONS

THE drama of the seasons is nearing the last act, and this year-as in all years the tens on quickens as crops begin to mature.

No spectacle in the world is more enthralling and more quietly impressive than this correlation of man's efforts and nature's largesse. The most fortunate people are those who are in touch with the countryside during the growing season. They are participants, as well as spectators, in the greatest miracle of the world. Their personal fortunes and welfare are tied up in what nature will bring in the next two months, but this does not prevent them from viewing the play of rain, sun and soil as part of a great and awe-inspiring spectacle.

So much can happen within the space of a few hours or a few days. What is going on today on the western prairies affects millions of people outside this Dominion, and there is no one able to forecast with any real assurance what the harvest will be. It is possible to gauge other business probabilities with fair accuracy, because they are dependent on man-made laws. But not so the crops. They are controlled by power which man cannot dominate. Today the prospects may be wonderful. Tomorrow, wide-spread hail or frost may wipe out a season's work for thousands of farmers and affect the future bread supply in far-off countries. Today the intense heat may be shrivelling the wheat. Tomorrow a life-giving rain may transform the picture. Each day brings its own gift, kind or cruel, from nature to build steadily toward the grand climax.

City life, with its eternal busyness over buying and selling, and secondary pursuits, gives little opportunity for observing the play of sun and rain and wind upon the earth. People, so confined, are out of touch with the realities, with the eternal conflict between man and nature, and the eternal bond that links them. They are less aware of fundamental rules of cause and effect, and of the continuing processes by which mankind lives and has his being. Perhaps for that reason they may be less patient, steady and sane under trial. They have lost contact with nature, and her power to bless or ban and to reawaken hope.

Speaking of the local scene, but only as of today, this district appears to be favored this year as it has been in many past years. Many areas of the prairies are facing the prospect of meager crops and their cry all season has been for rain. In this section of Southern Alberta we have had rain and we have had sun. Whether they have been mixed in proper proportions remains to be learned. But the prospect is for a better crop than in most other parts of the west. That however, is merely "prospect." We go from day to day, watching the unfolding drama with heightening concern. And no one knows what the finale will be until the grain is harvested and graded.

CONTINUITY IN ROAD BUILDING

THE editor of the Stettler Independent has been travelling the main highway from Lacombe to Red Deer and did not enjoy the experience. His musings on Alberta road building leads him to this thought: "Road building should be the work of road builders. We have made it the work of politicians. In getting rid of the party government of the past we have substituted another party government of the present, and this means that there can be no systematic co-ordination of work as we pass from one government to the other, either in road building or anything else. When a new party gets into power, it is going to start something new. That is what has happened our No. One Highway from Calgary to Edmonton."

"I am not blaming any particular government for the condition of our main artery of travel. As I said last week: 'We have had no systematic planning of our highway system, since the province was first established in 1905. The ministers of public works follow each other down the years, but each of them starts all over again, and there has been no co-ordination in their work for the past forty years.'

"The condition of our No. One Highway and the lack of systematic planning of our road construction everywhere is not the fault of any particular administration. It is a demonstration of the fact that our political form of government is not much good for the job of making a business of our provincial affairs."

"The essential work of our legislature is usually in no way different, except in quantity, from that done by our various municipal districts, urban and rural. Under these circumstances, the party system should never have been introduced into the provincial field at all."

The writer proposes that we move a step at a time toward a provincial commission form of government so that the actual administration of business could be carried along by a non-partisan committee completely apart from the changing party governments. He concludes:

"Premier Manning is a young man, who has no political affiliations to speak of. If he would install such a system of non-partisan committees, he would earn the gratitude of the taxpayers of the province."

FAIR PLAY

NEWS carried by the Canadian Press that the Canadian Pacific Railway and the Canadian National Railway are seeking an increase in freight rates hit westerners with the impact of a blockbuster. For years, the provincial governments of the three western provinces have been seeking a reduction in freight charges, which discriminate against Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. This province, in particular, takes the harsh end of the stick in paying freight charges from the east. Figures compiled by the Alberta government show that the railways, in order to compete with ocean shipping, will carry freight from Montreal to Vancouver for less money than the same freight will be carried to Edmonton.

Surely this is an injustice to Albertans. For the past five years Canadian railways have done a wonderful job in lifting this country's war effort. They have increased their tonnage tremendously, and have carried on in the face of shortages of both manpower and rolling stock. There are two sides to this question, however. They have been paid, and paid well, for their strenuous efforts, and both railway companies have made more money in recent years than they have for decades; now it is reported that they seek to raise freight rates.

If the government grants the railways this increase, it should make sure, first, that the present discriminatory rates in Alberta are made comparable with those in other provinces. At the present time, this province is at the apex in the freight rate structure. If a general increase goes through, Alberta will once more be asked to pay the railways more for their services than any other province. This is a question that should be brought home to the federal government by all organizations in the province.

Pertinent Topics

Discussed by H. C.

It could not have been mere coincidence that on the eve of the Petain trial statements by Reynaud and Gamelin were published in newspapers all over the world. Petain's side had been presented in various ways and by various agencies in an effort to make him appear a patriot and a hero. Jean Charles Harvey some time ago, accused the C.B.C. of placing him on a pedestal, in Canada and a distinguished cleric referred to him at a large public gathering in Ottawa as "the noble Petain"; his government was recognized by our government and statues or prints of him are proudly displayed in many Canadian homes.

While his trial is before a French court, he is really being tried by the conscience of France and the opinion of the world, and the Reynaud and Gamelin statements were no doubt intended to offset the build-up carefully and ingeniously made by his partisans. Gamelin's statement is like himself, colorless. The only positive thing he says that one remembers is that he issued an army order and it was not obeyed. He does not say why; does not even speculate.

When events were coming to a head a French journalist, Pertinax, I think, had a long interview with him. He was unhurried, unfurled. All was well with him although evil forces, not all German, were closing their grip at that moment upon throat of his army. He did not know what was going on; did not yet. He was not consciously false to his trust. He was not conscious at all. He was simply plain dumb, or in a trance. If events were conspiring to ruin his army they were lucky in the character of the man in command. Let no one cast a slur on the character or courage of that army however. In similar case the German army would have been easy picking.

Anyone would leave a slimy tortuous trail who would attempt to do what Petain now says he did—collaborate with Germany to save France. His plea that he was also helping the Allies is trumped up now to save what he thinks is his honor and what he knows is his neck. Those who are pursuing his trial now have the same perplexity as that of the hunter who came upon a similar trail.

It wiggled in and wiggled out. Leaving the hunter still in doubt. Whether the thing that made the track

Was coming in or going back.

There were no allies then. There had been an ally—the one that was betrayed. How could he help her by trapping her army in France and Belgium and by handing over French airfields and channel ports to her in the east to have the Japs given a toe-hold in French Indo-China? Why should he help her anyway when her failure meant that he would become overlord of France while her success would mean his trial for treason and probably his death as a traitor? Defence counsel can help him most by harping on the fact that he is an old man and a Marshal of France if they succeed.

Paul Reynaud asks how Petain knew so definitely that in May, 1941 the French army would crash and France should fall. Here's where that old story fits in of the boy who when asked how his father was declared, that he was going to die. Asked how he could be so sure about it he said: "Well, the Doctor says so and he knows what he gave him." Mussolini knew within a day when it would be safe to attack France. He was a good guess that Generalissimo Franco could at that time have made equally accurate forecasts.

The man who ran against Churchill an independent without any party backing, got 10,000 on a one-hour-a-day work policy. It is interesting but useless to speculate as to whether he would have beaten Churchill if he had lived his constituents of that one hour of toil per day.

Three quirks of democracy must keep Comrade Stalin in a quandary. How can he be sure that Atlee with 400 to 200 has the people of Britain behind him when up until the other day he was sure Churchill with 400 to 200 had them behind him?

Work of T.B. Association

The Alberta T.B. Association now has two mobile units operating through Alberta. The total number X rayed up to June 21, 1945, were 117,554. Of these 308 were probable actives in respect to T.B.

An interesting expansion of the work of the Association is in Occupational therapy instituted for patients in the sanatorium. All tools, equipment and other expenses are carried by the Association except the teachers' salary. About 100 patients are engaged in making such articles as leather gloves, wallets, belts, toy animals, etc. All articles are sterilized and sold immediately, bringing modest returns to the workers, besides congenial employment. This work, begun in Calgary, is being carried on in Edmonton also with 41 patients engaged.

There is also a system evolving to assist patients in finding work, and otherwise helping them toward re-establishment. There is also financial assistance in needy cases.

The patients are diagnosed for their capacity for work both in the sanatorium and upon discharge. This thorough system of inquiry and study simplifies treatment of the patient, and advances rehabilitation on procedure.

There were 167 divorces in B.C. in July, an all-time monthly record. But the marriages are still keeping ahead of the divorces.

writes that "old Churchill put up a great fight in the elections and that the more turbulent a meeting, the more he enjoyed it. 'The best speech of the campaign' he said 'was made by Eden, but no speech against socialism was equal to the one made by Mr. Meighan a year or so ago in Vancouver.' Crisps he picks as the worst of the lot, 'a lazy Sanctionist and incompetent doctrinaire, unreasoning to the point of complete irresponsibility.'"

Not once or twice in her rough island story has Britain manoeuvred herself into a position where she can show the world that she can muddle through.

REGULAR MEETING LADIES' AUXILIARY

The monthly meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Canadian Legion was held Thursday, July 26, with a fair attendance of members. The meeting opened in the usual form and several interesting letters of appreciation were read from the boys overseas. Blocks for the Victory Quilt, being made by the members, were displayed, showing promise of a really beautiful quilt. Names of 288 boys and girls on active service are being embroidered, representing many from Lomond, Champion, Milo, Brant and Ensign as well as Vulcan. Tickets will be sold on this quilt in the fall to help the Auxiliary to carry on its work. It was decided to hold an auction sale at the next meeting, with a view to making some extra money. Members are being asked to donate anything they wish to the sale, and the articles will be sold by auction at the meeting. It was thought this would serve a double purpose—creating some amusement as well as help with finances. An interesting contest will also be a feature of this one evening. Members are asked to keep the date of the meeting in mind and to make a special effort to attend.

The following letter was received recently from Tpr. Boyd Whitehead, by the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Canadian Legion:

"Dear Friends: Today I was made very happy with 300 export cigarettes from you. This time they were appreciated more than ever before, as I had never been so short before. Seems that since the war quit the cigarettes and canteen supplies have dropped right off. Guess they have forgotten us already. Yes, and believe it or not, we have been smoking English cigarettes lately. Maybe you don't know what they are like, but take it from me, they aren't so good.

"I have been handicapped by a cold and the flu for the past week. The weather here doesn't seem to agree with me. I hope all of you and yours are OK. And really hope that your great organization is appreciated and praised to the full extent of which it deserves.

"There isn't must I can write about this time, but I surely hope to see you all soon. Right now I haven't the slightest idea when it will be through.

"Respectfully yours,
"Boyd Whitehead."

Obituary

ALEXANDER ANDERSON PASSES TO RE T

Funeral services for Alexander Anderson, aged 76 years, old timer of the Travers district, who passed to rest in the Vulcan hospital, on Thursday, July 26th, were conducted from St. Aldhelm's Anglican church, on Tuesday, July 31 at 2:30 p.m., Rev. Vivian S. Lord, conducting the services.

Born in Sweden, deceased moved to the United States in his youth. After pursuing several callings there, he came to Canada and settled in the vicinity of Travers, where he farmed for over thirty-eight years. Part of that time he was associated with the late Nels Olsen, who died a few years ago.

He left to mourn his loss, a brother and a sister and several nephews and nieces in the United States as well as a host of friends in the district. He was highly respected in the district and will be missed by all those who knew him.

Funeral services were: Fred Lindblad, Tom Charman, Elvin Benson, Don Velekey and August Huff. Interment followed in the Vulcan cemetery. Jones' Funeral Home had charge of arrangements.

50,000 Homes To Be Built

In order to speed home-building this year, special arrangements have been made for the early release from the Armed forces of experienced workers needed for home construction and the production of materials for home building, according to an announcement made by Hon. Humphrey Mitchell, Minister of Labour.

"Canada's program calls for the building of 50,000 homes immediately," the Labour Minister said, "and the continuing labor shortages are seriously hampering the project. An obvious and primary need of home builders is out of the fact that living quarters must be found for members of the armed services on discharge."

The Labour Minister explained that building contractors wanting to build homes, and employers producing materials needed for home construction, should make application to the nearest Industrial Selection and Release Committee, in order to secure the speedy release from the armed services of any man they know to be experienced in the work of home building, or in producing essential building materials. There are 11 of these committees, located at Halifax, St. John, Quebec, Montreal, Kingston, London, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Edmonton, and Vancouver.

QUICK ACTION

Quick action and courage of an Okalta Oils employee resulted in saving a giant tank filled with gas and oil when it was stuck by lightning at Turner Valley.

Martin Neilson observing flames coming from the top of the tank, calmly picked up a nearby coat, climbed to the top of the tank and smothered the fire. The bolt had knocked a saw which Neilson had been using, about 30 feet in the air.

Rationing helps the FARMER

HERE'S HOW!

- Rationing assures everyone a fair share of scarce foods. Without rationing, farmers might get all the butter they need, they might not get sugar. City dwellers might get sugar but no butter.
- Rationing helps to keep prices steady.
- Rationing has assured farmers sufficient ammunition to protect their crops and livestock.
- Rationing makes it possible for farmers to get coupons to feed harvesters and other transient farm workers.

The FARMER helps Rationing
HERE'S HOW!

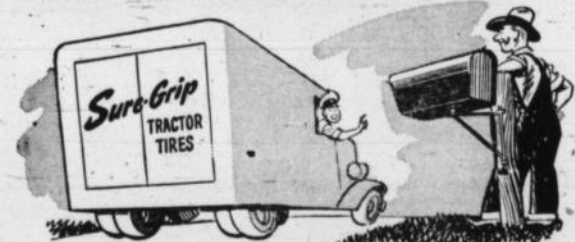

- By collecting and turning in the coupons acquired against the use and sale of butter and the sale of honey and rationed maple products.
- By writing to the Local Ration Boards for application form RB-77 as SOON as they know definitely that transient labour rations will be needed to feed extra help hired for periods of less than two weeks.

Rationing is not intended to add unnecessarily to the burden of Canadian farmers who, faced with shortages of labour, materials and machinery, have continued to respond to repeated calls for greater production.

It is a protection against waste... shortages... inflation.

Over One Million In Armed Forces

Total intake into the Canadian armed forces from the start of the war to April 1945, was 992,103 persons. In addition there were 17,900 taken in outside Canada to bring the total to 1,009,003. B.C. contributed the largest percentage of military age, and Quebec the lowest.

More than half Canada's adult population was either in armed forces or gainfully employed on April 1, 1945. This was 5,058,000 persons or 56.5% of the population. Of that number 201,000 were turning out raw materials and 628,000 were in war plants.

Of the female population over 14 years of age, estimated at 4,700,000 there were 1,077,000 gainfully employed in the services or other than farm home.

War employment reached its peak in October, 1943 when 1,166,000 persons were in war work.

The number of male agricultural workers dropped from 1,225,000 in 1939 to 1,050,000 in April, 1945.

The Serviceman's Corner

(By J. O. S.)

The greatest single problem that we have to face today, and the one that concerns us most is the successful re-establishment of our armed forces into suitable occupations. It is not necessary for me to warn you of the gravity of the situation if we fail in this our most important responsibility. The key to a successful and prosperous nation is full employment, and a satisfactory standard of living for all.

Our discharged service personnel for this purpose fall into three distinct and separate classes, each with their own particular difficulties, variations and problems. First we have those who left jobs and joined one of His Majesty's forces. Second and by far the largest, we have those who never had a job, and who have no particular qualifications to fit them for any position in our scheme of organized society. Thirdly, we have those whose education has been disrupted by the war.

As this problem is so important and involved, I propose to discuss each one separately and as fully as possible in this and the next two issues of this paper.

In the first case we have those who left jobs and joined the army, navy or airforce. This problem has been made considerably easier for us by the passing of an act known as The Reinstatement in Civilian Employment Act, which clearly states that an employer must take back a man or woman into his employment who left his staff to join the services. Despite this straight forward legislation it is causing a great deal of comment among some employers. They state that they have had to train someone else for that particular job, increased their wages, and now hesitate to demote this man who has served him so faithfully through times of stress and strain. Remember this is not the attitude taken by all employers, and only goes to strengthen my assertion of the situations we have to deal with. Nevertheless, this is the legislation and must be adhered to. If anyone can furnish us with information that this order has been violated we will only be too glad to bring it to the attention of the proper authorities. It is quite possible that, as a result of service that they may not wish to continue with their previous trade or profession. If this be the case then we will have to deal with them under our second group. Let me warn those who are contemplating a change, to think the matter over carefully, before coming to a decision. With the volume of work that has to be accomplished, we must all do our part if the various departments are to give you the most efficient service.

If anyone has had any particular difficulty with regard to the above I would appreciate it very much if you would write and give me the particulars so that your case may be investigated.

Thank you, Vet, from the Crows Nest for your timely suggestions
